I'm working with an old software that, for some reasons, has all files in directories with the same extension (not specified in the application and in no way related to the format of the file, in fact the extension is random for each file in a directory). I tried many scripts, but none of them is doing what I want, either because of the file extension or because of some directories that I do not want to be processed. A: See if this helps: for filename in ./*; do newfilename=$(basename "$filename".*).new; mv "$filename" "$newfilename"; done Fabrication and deposition of gold nanoparticles and their application for quantification of isocyanate species. A method for the fabrication of gold nanoparticles (Au NPs) and their application for quantification of isocyanate species is described. The fabrication of Au NPs was achieved by reaction of tetrachloroauric acid (HAuCl<sub>4</sub>) and sodium borohydride (NaBH<sub>4</sub>). The nanoparticles were found to be spherical in shape with a diameter of 25 nm. The Au NPs were utilized as a redox probe in the potentiometric detection of isocyanate species. The isocyanate species were found to be quantitatively reduced to aniline. The current work describes the use of Au NPs as an attractive alternative to use of other nanomaterials. have greater motivation to pursue self-care, improved their life satisfaction, and reduced stress 82157476af
